Following an extensive application and interview process Kakulwa learned that he had been accepted to the USAP Zambia college preparation programme. This programme is designed to assist Zambian youth in accessing university places and scholarships around the globe. It provides preparation for the SAT college-readiness aptitude test as well as assistance in writing application essays and applications.

In addition to attending a 'boot camp' in Lusaka over the vacation, Kakulwa will attend workshops hosted in Harare. This is all funded by USAP Zambia.

USAP began in Zimbabwe in 1999 with the aim of providing access to higher education for determined, bright, low-income youth, thus producing highly-skilled and liberally-educated leaders for tomorrow's Zimbabwe. More than a decade later, more than 300 Zimbabwean USAP students have excelled as students at America's top colleges and universities, and many are continuing graduate studies or are working all over the globe.

USAP works closely with students through a year-long program of meetings and seminars designed to empower and assist them throughout the application and orientation process, while building their confidence and bonding them as a supportive family who share similar backgrounds and will be facing similar challenges while studying in the US. In the US, USAP students run an active listserv, yearly conferences, a trust fund to support application and preparation costs of future USAP students, and provide intensive support for one another. USAP expects a commitment from students to give back of their energy and time to the "USAP family" and to their own communities at home and in school.

USAP provides many benefits to colleges and universities: pre-screened, well-rounded applicants, focused, committed and involved students, and economically-diverse international students. www.usapglobal.org
