Lewis University, IL

Naested was thrilled to wake up this morning to find his first acceptance and scholarship in his inbox!

Naested has been accepted to study Aviation at Lewis University in the Chicago metropolitan area, Illinois. Home to United Airlines, Boeing Corporation and the 2nd busiest airport in the world, O'Hare International, there's no better place than the Chicago metropolitan area to gain direct access to the practical, hands-on experience students must have to launch an exciting career in aviation.

With active partnerships at both O'Hare and Midway International airports, and its very own regional airport right on-campus, Lewis provides a total immersion into the aviation industry that is simply unmatched by programs in more rural locations.

Lewis University programs are FAA-approved and nationally recognized. In fact, Lewis was recently awarded the Loening Trophy as the outstanding all-around collegiate aviation program in the nation.

As a national leader in aviation education, established in 1932, the Lewis University name is well known and highly regarded giving aviation graduates a strong professional network to tap into and a competitive advantage. Because Lewis offers more than just a "technical" program students are also exposed to courses in business, management, technology and liberal arts - exactly the type of holistic background aviation employers seek. www.lewisu.edu
